

Hold Harmless Addendum: Study Sites for Field School Prairie Earth, Prairie Homes – 11-18 July 2010

The field school is a collaborative effort by North Dakota State University, which offers the course, and Preservation North Dakota, which is conducting the restoration of the Hutmacher Farmstead. You are asked, therefore, as students in the field school, to sign release forms holding NDSU and PND harmless for the risks associated with the field school.

In addition, there are a number of other collaborators and hosts making the field school possible, namely the owners of historic earth building properties who allow us to enter their properties and study the buildings. You are asked, therefore, to sign one more hold-harmless release, by which you hold harmless the property owners and accept the risks of entering their properties.

Hold Harmless Agreement

In consideration of the courtesy of property owners who are allowing field school participants to enter their properties and study their historic buildings, I, as a student in the field school, agree to hold harmless, release, and discharge them from claims, demands, causes of action, and legal liability. I will not bring any claims, demands, or legal actions against any of these property owners for ordinary negligence in the course of the field school.
